W. H. KITCHIN.
COMPETITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE.

The world is full of competition, and some it is dangerous, and some it is keeping the house in order. It is keeping a man a competitor to the "great." And now it is a competitor to the "small," and competition is the only excuse for it, and competition is only justified by saying that it is an unavoidable condition, and is an undoubted curse to the South.

But how to buy cheap man as well, Com. Comp. of less, you'll have no less, And bid I am still of the, the BOSS.

Tales of the past and the dollars waiting come of themselves, and right here they leave to show that a visit to my store and inquiry into my price will convince you of the fact that no where else can you save so many cents in one dollar's worth of trade.
